Abraham Lincoln [edit]

Abraham Lincoln's mother Nancy Hanks was claimed to be of African descent (Ethiopian). Hanks has been proven to be white.[15][17][18]

According to historian William E. Barton, a rumor "current in various forms in several sections of the South" was that Lincoln's biological father was Abraham Enloe, which Barton dismissed as "false".[34] According to Doug Wead, Enloe made a public boast that he was Lincoln's real father, and Thomas Lincoln allegedly fought him, biting off a piece of his nose.[35] Another claim was that Lincoln was "part Negro",[36] but that was unproven.[37][38] According to Lincoln's law partner William H. Herndon, Lincoln had "very dark skin"[39] although "his cheeks were leathery and saffron-colored"[40] and "his face was ... sallow,"[40] and "his hair was dark, almost black".[41] Abraham Lincoln described himself c. 1838–39 as a "long black fellow"[42] and his "complexion" in 1859 as "dark",[43] but whether he meant either in an ancestral sense is unknown. The anti-Lincoln Charleston Mercury described him as being "of ... the dirtiest complexion",[44] as part of anti-abolitionist race-baiting.[12] Rumors of Lincoln's alleged black racial heritage are considered unsubstantiated and have not been acknowledged by historians.[19]
